ASHLAND WOMAN WANTS AN OFFICE

WOULD BE COUNTY TREASURER

WROTE ATTORNEY-GENERAL

That There is Nothing in the State
Law That Prohibits a Woman
Holding an Elective Office.

Madison, Wis., June 3.—Nellie M. Archibald, the deputy treasurer of Ashland county, and a candidate to become the full-fledged county treasurer, in a letter to Attorney General Gilbert says there is nothing in the Wisconsin statutes giving women the right to vote, but that men are not denied the right of voting upon women for county office.

Miss Archibald formally announced her candidacy and wants her name placed upon the regular ballot. She intimates it has reached her attention that the attorney general's department was not included to hold in her favor and declares the attorney general has absolutely no discretion in the matter.

Miss Archibald states that women have been elected to county offices in Kansas and Nebraska, where the laws are substantially the same as in Wisconsin, and says that in Wisconsin there is a constitutional limitation of the right of suffrage to males, but insists that women are not denied the right to hold offices, maintaining that the laws are absolutely silent on this subject.

was introduced to the assembly by neighboring village of Roundhead, that he delivered his maiden political speech, in the Garfield campaign of thirty years ago. Immediately after the close of the exercises at the uni-for Detroit.

President Taft in his address to the graduating class gave a word of ad-professions and business pursuits.

The law, industry, medicine, teach-

"muckraking" and expressed a belief that the unjust phase of the newspapers' activity soon would be a thing of the past. He praised Roosevelt's earnestness against muckrakers. In this connection, Secretary of War was mentioned by the President, who was referred to as one of the problems that will have to be considered during the next

EACH ELM COST PINT OF RUM

How the Shade Trees of Kittery Point Were Planted by Patriotic Citizens.

One of the most striking attractions of the old town of Kittery Point has long been her towering elms, says the Kittery Journal. They rise magnificently above trees of all other varieties and in summer with their foliage enclose her quaint streets in delicious green coolness, transform the fine old place into a veritable seashore fairyland, and last but not least enrapture the summer visitor.

For nearly two miles along the highway, which for the most part follows the shore of the harbor, these splendid specimens rear themselves at fairly regular intervals, though the ax has in time past brought some of the monarchs crashing to the earth.

The story of the circumstances attending the planting of the giants, as it has been handed down from father to son, runs as follows: "Maj. Thomas Cuts, one of the old town fathers, who conducted a fishing business, foreign commerce, a store and a tavern in the famous Popperly mansion (built 1662) conceived the very commendable idea of beautifying his native town by setting out trees.

"Accordingly in 1791 he gave one Samuel Blake the contract. Samuel's remuneration was nothing more or less than a pint of rum, doubtless brought from the West Indies, by one of the major's plunkers, for each tree planted. There were originally 30 of them, and they extended from the Benney lot, near where the First Christian church now stands, to the 'Top of the Point' or the shore of Spruce creek."

A Poultry Point.

"Always ask for the right leg of a chicken or turkey," said a chef. "If the left leg is offered you refuse it. It will be tough and stringy."

"You see, these birds nearly always roost on one leg, the left. Hence that leg becomes very muscular. The shins are like steel. It is an excellent leg from the athletic, but a vile one from the culinary point of view. "Put the favored right leg remains tender and juicy. Therefore, as the advertisements say, 'Ask for and insist on getting the right leg.'"

Pleasure's Chains.

Pleasure has a nasty way of engrossing us until it almost becomes work.

DEMANDS REFUSED;
55 STEEL WORKERS
STRUCK YESTERDAY

Foreigners Laying Rails Between Janesville and Milton Walked Out Last Night.

When their demands for an increase in wages of twenty-five cents a day, permission to work only every other Sunday and three and a half for Sunday work were refused by the road, fifty-five foreigners employed by the company in laying rails on the North-Western Wisconsin division between this city and Milton, quit in a body last night and are still out today.

The gang was put to work about two weeks ago, starting to lay rails just north of the city and working toward Milton. They have received $1.50 a day and have been compelled to work seven days a week. Yesterday they asked that their pay be raised to $1.75 and they be allowed every other Sunday off. This was refused and the men refused to go to work this morning. A majority of the men are Italians or Poles and have been lodged in box cars, ten of which are situated in the company's gravel pit north of town. According to reports, the company will not grant their demands and will probably evict them from the cars today and secure a new contingent from Chicago. The strikers have been very quiet thus far and it is probable that there will be no scenes of disorder such as occurred last summer when the steel gang working on the Evansville cut-off struck.

George Armstrong Had Arm Laid Open Yesterday Afternoon by Heavy Piece of Steel.

While working under an engine at the roundhouse yesterday afternoon about half past three, George Armstrong, a machinist, was painfully and seriously injured by a heavy wedge which fell on his right forearm and crushed the arm so severely that eighteen stitches were required to close the wound. He was taken to the hospital and is reported to be resting easily today.

Armstrong came here from Danville, Ill., and has been working at the local yards for the past two months. Yesterday, he was told to drop a pair of drivers from engine 1334 and was in the drop pit while the wheels were being lowered. At the same time that the drivers were detached, the wedge and shoe holding them were dislodged and the latter, which weighs nearly fifty pounds, fell. It struck the machinist on the right forearm and inflicted a terrible wound which bled profusely. Armstrong was immediately placed on an engine and taken to the hospital where Dr. Palmer attended him.

YOUNG LADS TAKE MANY RISKS STEALING RIDES

Efforts of Railroad Employees Futile in Attempting to Prevent Youngsters From Risking Lives.

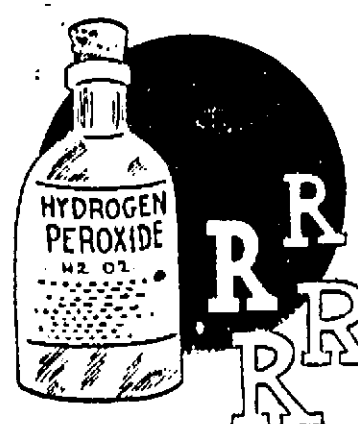

Townsmen and flagmen at the five points and the Academy and Jackson street crossings are having much trouble with a number of lads who have been making a practice of slipping freight trains during the early hours of the evening. The boys refuse to listen to well meant warnings and take chances that would terrify their parents. One of their favorite stunts is jumping from train 578 on the North-Western and the dog run on the St. Paul, both trains leaving the yards about seven o'clock and moving on parallel tracks. Several of the boys have had narrow escapes from death but in spite of attempts to restrain them, they persist in the dangerous practice.

Engine 251, which broke a chaling iron and pulled loose from the tender yesterday, is in the house for repairs.

Fireman Dooley is on the switch engine today with Engineer James.

Her Games.

Mattie's mother is a Christian Scientist, therefore the delightful game of "play sick" is forbidden to Mattie. Recently her mother was horrified to hear Mattie explaining to several other little girls: "No, I wasn't play sick. I may play 'drunk' or 'crazy,' but I mustn't play 'sick.'"

The Amethyst Pin

"There is such a thing as being too conscientious," remarked young Mrs. Langton, daintily.

"Have you suffered from it?" asked her friend.

"You may smile if you like, but I have suffered from the effects of the abnormally developed conscience of my mother-in-law. Do you remember the amethyst pin you admired so much when I wore it to your luncheon?"

"Indeed, I do. It was so pretty with your wisteria gown."

"It was," declared Mrs. Langton. "It was lovely with that little dress. And to think that I bought a suit and a hat with special reference to that pin! The worst of it is that Walter doesn't sympathize with me at all. He just laughs and says that untruths are always punished in some way or other."

"I can't offer my sympathy until you tell me about it," hinted her friend.

"It was this way, Mamma Langton thinks that Walter and I are very extravagant. She was horrified at the amount of money we spent in furnishing the house, and when an afterthought we bought the clock, though any one will admit that it looks as if it had been made for the spot at the turn of the stairway, she almost wept. I made up my mind then and there that the next thing we bought which couldn't be classed with the necessities of life would have to be purchased by stealth."

"One day when I met my husband down town I asked him to stop for a moment at the window where the pin was displayed. I mentioned casually that it would be sweet with my new dress, adding that of course it was out of the question for us to buy it."

"Walter is of a peculiar disposition. Just tell him that he oughtn't to spend his money for a particular article, and he straightway is determined to have that very thing. Well, he went in and bought the amethyst. I suggested that we say nothing about the matter to his mother for awhile, and I had worn the pin a number of times before she saw it."

"Then what happened?"

"It was one day when I was dressing in a great hurry. I asked her to come to my room and hook my waist for me, forgetting that the pin was on my dressing table."

"That is something new," she said, picking up the ornament. "Where did you get it?"

"Oh, that is just a pin I found," I replied, anxious to get out of it the best way I could.

"When?" she asked.

"Yesterday," I returned.

"Then it is your duty to advertise it."

"It isn't worth it," I said, for the stone isn't genuine."

"That is where you are mistaken," she insisted. "The stone is a fine color and the setting is beautiful."

"Then I will wear it today," I said, reaching out my hand for it."

"No, I wouldn't if I were you," she objected. "Where did you find it?"

"Under the seat of the street car. I saw it glitter, you know," I answered, getting in deeper and deeper.

"You want to find the real owner, don't you, Beatrice?" she asked, in her severest manner.

"Of course, I do," I stammered.

"Then I will look it up in my little safe until you are sure you may wear it with a clear conscience," and she marched off with it.

"Next day Walter and I went to New York and were gone a week. Almost the first thing Mamma Langton said when we entered the house on our return was, 'Well, Beatrice, I found the owner of the amethyst pin!'"

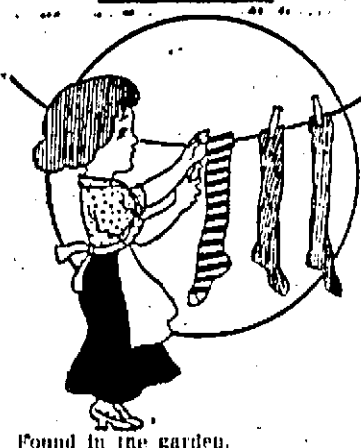

"I merely gasped, and she went on: 'Of course, you wouldn't have enjoyed wearing it until everything possible had been done to find the owner, so I deemed it best to put an advertisement in the newspapers. I had a number of answers and one of them described the pin almost exactly. So I replied to it. A very nice woman called and after she had paid me for the notice I gave her the pin. She was delighted.'"

"What is her address?" I asked in a choked voice.

"I don't know, I'm sure. But what does it matter?" asked my mother-in-law.

"Now my lovely amethyst is gone forever!"

"Excuse me for laughing," apologized Mrs. Langton's friend, "but it is funny, you know."

PARTY PLEDGES.

Whether or not the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill is the best tariff bill ever enacted, the people are not satisfied, and no amount of argument will convince them that the pledges of the party in power have been kept.

The feeling prevails throughout the west, that the high price of woolen and cotton goods, as well as a long line of manufactured goods produced by the New England states, is due to over protection, and that the capital invested in reaping a rich harvest is the result.

Right or wrong, this is popular sentiment, and the republican congress is held responsible for these conditions. Public opinion may not always be right but it may never safely be ignored, and the least that congress can do is to provide a tariff commission and the necessary appropriation to support it.

This is what President Taft recommends, and it would be the first intelligent move in solving a question which the lawmakers are unable to handle because of so many conflicting interests.

The best business thought in the country, represented by the National Manufacturers' association, endorses the plan, and suggested it to congress two years ago, but congress is jealous of its prerogatives and will tolerate no interference.

A non-partisan committee, composed of business and professional men, whose time shall be devoted to a thorough study of the complex question, in all of its details, would accomplish more in a year than congress can in a decade.

The day of infant industries has passed and the only thing that needs protecting today is American labor. The cost of production at home and abroad is largely represented in the wage scale, and there is no disposition to admit foreign made goods at prices with which we can not compete. This was tried during Cleveland's last administration, and the result was an army of tramps specifically followed.

The people who are howling the loudest for tariff revision, are not competent to revise the tariff, any more than the men who are clamoring for railroad regulation are competent to run the railroads, but the republican party possesses not only the ability, but the machinery to deal with this important question, and it should assume the responsibility.

If local conditions interfere with unbiased judgment, as they seem to do in many cases, then an unbiased commission is the only solution of the problem.

The republican party is the party of protection and progress. The nation has long prospered under its wise administration, and it will continue to prosper if its representatives in congress are faithful to the trust reposed in them.

The democratic party aspires to leadership with some hopes for success on account of factional disturbances within republican ranks, but the people will think twice before deciding to transfer responsibility.

Democratic success would not mean a satisfactory adjustment of the tariff. The party has long been known as a free trade party and tariff revision in the hands of democracy would prove a farce with most disastrous results.

The tariff should be revised by its friends—the party now in power. This is what President Taft is trying to accomplish through a commission, and congress can not afford to block the way.

THE REPUBLICAN CONFERENCE.

The invitation to attend the republican conference to be held at the court house tomorrow afternoon is so broad that it should include every republican in the country.

Loyalty to the president and the national administration is the only requirement. The expression of loyalty will be a pleasure to every member of the party who has confidence in the man elected to the high office of chief executive.

President Taft is placed in a peculiar and trying position, through lack of party harmony in congress. He is in no way responsible for these conditions, and has exhausted every effort to bring harmony out of confusion.

The republicans throughout the country are with the president, and the republicans of Wisconsin are given an opportunity to express loyalty by coming together and endorsing him.

Aside from this action, which is significant, this occasion means more to the republicans of Wisconsin than of any other state, because it is the first time in years that an opportunity is given to get together as a party and organize for work.

This lack of organization has resulted in all sorts of misunderstandings, and the factional fight, which disrupted the party for many years, might have been avoided by mutual agreement had opportunity been given to get together.

Party harmony is most desirable and this can only be perpetuated through organization. Republican conventions in every county in the state, to be followed by a state convention in Milwaukee, will result in a re-organization, with loyalty and harmony as the watchword, a result so desirable that it is welcomed by republicans throughout the state. All Taft republicans are cordially invited to the meeting on Saturday. The city and county should be well represented.

The statement was made a long time ago that the most of us are crazy on one or more counts, but it remained for Dr. Kollogg, a Boston professor, to discover that everybody will be howling maniacs before the close of the twenty-third century. As proof will be difficult to establish the doctor will be given the benefit of the doubt.

The heavy decline in railway stocks, as the result of government regulation, is a forerunner of retrenchments and a crippled service. There is but little encouragement for the roads to spend money for extension and betterments, and if so disposed the money would be difficult to secure under present conditions.

Vice President Sherman will attend the republican conference to be held in Milwaukee next week, and talk for the administration. The meeting promises to be enthusiastic and will result in re-organizing the party along the lines of harmony, with loyalty as the watchword.

The laying of the corner stone for the new half million dollar city hall in Des Moines, Iowa will be celebrated by an exposition June 14. The enterprise is due to the successful operation of the commission form of government, which has made the city famous.

President Taft will appreciate the endorsement of Wisconsin republicans. The conflicting elements in Washington have had a depressing influence, and he will be glad to know that his friends have not all deserted him.

The state of New York has over 100,000 automobiles, representing a cost of more than $150,000,000. There is a reason for the cost of high living in the Empire State.

Uncle Walt

THE POET PHILOSOPHER
By WALT MASON.
(Copyright, 1909, by George Matthews Adams.)

The little green tents where the soldiers sleep, and the umbrellas play and the women weep, are covered with flowers today; and between the tents walk the weary few who were young and stalwart in 'sixty-two, when they went to the war away. The little green tents are built of wood, and they are not long, and they are not broad, but the soldiers have lots of room and the sea is part of the land they march, when the flag of the enemy darkly waved, the symbol of doom and doom. The little green tent is a thing divine; the little green tent is a country's shrine, where pa-trials lined and pray; and the brave men left, so old, so few, were young and stalwart in 'sixty-two, when they went to the war away.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

WHY?
Young Mr. Knox, son of the secretary of state, against the wishes of his parents ran away with and married a poor girl. He was practically disowned.

Afterward there was a reconciliation, and young Mr. Knox repeated a statement attributed to her at the time of the elopement—namely, that she had never worked for a living.

Which was a poor boast. Certainly she was poor, and if she did not work who worked for her?

In place of being ashamed of herself she is ashamed of her poverty and considers it something less than an insult that it should be said she ever was employed in a shop or department store.

That is one way in which class distinctions arise in this country. When an honest laborer is ashamed of his work, how can it be otherwise than that other persons should take the cue and look down upon him and his work?

The dignity of labor is easily lost when the laborer no longer dignifies it. Being ashamed of honest toil is totally opposed to the spirit of American teaching, which says the man who heaves clay out of a ditch for wages is just as good as the congressman who is hired by the people.

He or she who does not work at something is a drone in the social hive. After watching the procession of well dressed people on the streets of one of our cities and being told that the people were all workers an Englishman asked, "But where are your leisure classes?"

"Oh," was the reply, "we call them tramps in our country."

Do you remember the experience of that rich woman in New York who dressed one of her maids in an expensive gown, hung jewels around her neck and introduced the young girl at a social function as a visiting friend? The maid, who was handsome and well educated, was much admired both for her looks and her evident refinement, and at least one young hopeful of the smart set nearly lost his heart to her on that evening.

There is many a maid or shopgirl who would grace any man's drawing room as mistress and queen of his house.

But here is a strange thing which I wish you might explain. Most wealthy men who have gone up the ladder to wealth and position by means of hard struggling take great pride in the fact that they are self made men, while most of the women who go up from poverty desire to conceal their early history.

Why?

Not a Good Trade.
According to the Manhattan Trade school the millinery trade is not a very good one for women, as there is a slack season that takes away the profits of the busy season. The trade school found difficulty in selling hats made by the apprentices, and now will merely train milliners' assistants.

Living is High

But I am not raising my dental prices one whit.

I am satisfied with doing a large business with a reasonable price for my services.

I think my practice has grown to be the largest and the best dental practice in this city, through my continued policy of doing the best of work at a reasonable price.

Don't be misled into paying twice what it is worth to fix your mouth.

Hot air may sound pretty, but "You have got to pay the bill" after the talk is over.

Don't forget that, My policy, as I say, is, "The best work at a reasonable price."

A Real Friend.

Honest men esteem and value nothing so much in this world as a real friend. Such a one is as it were another self, to whom we impart our most secret thoughts, who partakes of our joy, and comforts us in our affliction; add to this, that his company is an everlasting pleasure to us.—Pilgrimage.

Judge Not.

Can a being who is not wholly without sin give thoughts and admonition to others? Test your own heart? What are you yourself? See, my hands are rough with work—I have not merely asked them in prayer.—Auerbach.

NEW THINGS IN DENTAL SURGERY

WERE EXPLOITED IN SERIES OF CLINICS.

AT THE CITY HALL TODAY

Session of Southern Wisconsin Association of Dentists—Dr. J. H. Whitfield Mentioned For President.

Attendance at the Southern Wisconsin Dental association's annual meeting was increased to over sixty when the series of clinics was inaugurated at the city hall assembly room this morning. The patients required for the various operations and demonstrations were not lacking and the four clinics were filled throughout the forenoon.

The afternoon session was opened with reports on the morning clinics and Dr. C. W. Hall of Milwaukee read a paper on "Fractum Labii as a Factor in Orthodontia." The clinics were also resumed and completed. The convention terminates this evening and it was expected that the next place of meeting would be selected and officers chosen for the ensuing year between four and five o'clock. That Madison would get the honor of the association, would be named as president.

Among the dentists here today are: Dr. J. H. Rice of Cleveland, Tenn.; C. H. Sushall of Evansville; P. C. Steadman of Stoughton; B. L. Sushall of Delavan; J. W. Ames of Evansville; J. L. Hall of Edgerton; G. W. Snyder of Baraboo; A. J. Kuhnman and Raymond J. Wenker of Milwaukee.

FORMER JAMESVILLE MAN DIED IN UTAH

Word Received in This City of the Death of Edward H. Alris in Salt Lake City.

John S. Alris, 616 Milton avenue, has received word from Salt Lake City, Utah, of the death there on Saturday, May 21, of his brother, Edward H. Alris, a former Jamesville resident. His death followed a long illness, a bruise on the chest bone, a year causing a cancer. The deceased was born in Cherry Valley, New York, May 10, 1840 and came to this city with his parents when very young. He received his education here and lived here until 1883, when after his marriage to Miss Annie Conybe he moved to Fremont, Nebraska, engaging in farming and business there. In the year 1894 he became interested in a mining property in Utah and changed his residence to Salt Lake City, meeting with success in mining ventures. He became one of the prominent men of that city and at the time of his death was treasurer of the Salt Lake & Mercur railroad. The funeral was held on the Monday following his demise. Another brother, Robert Alris, resides in this city.

Ethos S. Kallio, Young Minister of Aslan-Amyria, Asks Jamesville People To Aid His Countrymen.

Ethos S. Kallio, a young Aslan-Amyrian minister of the gospel who is seeking aid for his countrymen who have been rendered destitute and helpless by the attacks and persecutions of the Turks on the Turkish and Persian frontiers, was a caller at the Gazette office yesterday. All of his relatives and old friends, he declares, have been slaughtered by the Sultan's troops. His countrymen saw some hope for relief from the outrages of the soldiery in the success of the Albanian rebellion during the latter part of April. Mr. Kallio has letters from Gov. E. T. Gilpin, pastor of the First Baptist church at Madison, Wis., Robert Gordon, pastor of the First Baptist church at Milwaukee, and others endorsing him and his mission.

Uncle Joe Popular With School Girls.
Pretty school girls and teachers have crowded the galleries of the house of representatives chamber every pleasant day lately. They come early as a rule and watch eagerly for the entrance of Uncle Joe Cannon. Two of the ladies' galleries are on the same side of the chamber as the speaker's rostrum. This makes it necessary for persons in the back rows to stretch their necks long and eagerly in the hope of catching a glimpse of Cannon. Those in the back rows watch for a chance to get farther forward in order to get a better view. Uncle Joe usually makes a bit with college and school girls when members escort them into his private office for a little speech. He knows how to please young folks and seldom fails to "capture the crowd."

Save Money On These June Specials All Through June

The late season has made the sale of merchandise very slow, and we find that we are overstocked in many of the departments. We realize that the only way to move goods this late in the season is to make a price so low that women will buy now whether they really have a need or not. The specials, and the clearance items mentioned here are radically reduced in price, but if this stock must move, price is the only thing that will do it. Comparisons with merchandise offered elsewhere only show the tremendous advantage of buying here. These bargains are not equaled anywhere.

The Optimist's Corner

Daily Helps to Health and Happiness

By GEORGE F. BUTLER, A. M., M. D.

Dr. J. L. Nascher says that the decline due to old age is not a retrogression of development. Not a single organ or function reverts to an infantile or youthful type. Instead, there is a change in the character or composition of an organ which impairs its action or causes abnormal action gradually more pronounced. He notes the present-day tendency with children to shorten the period of development and increase the mental and physical capacities, pass over the period of maturity with indifference and endeavor to lengthen the period of decline. We ignore the mode of living of those who lead a natural existence terminating in a natural death. Instead of shortening the period of development we should endeavor to lengthen it. Mental and physical tasks should not be carried to the point of fatigue. We should give more attention to the amount of sleep required at the various periods of life. But as long as men of modern life do not feel harm, they do not believe in its existence. Rejuvenescence (growing young again), depends primarily upon increased mental activity, and this in turn stimulates physical activity and vigor. Definite recommendations by Dr. Nascher are change of scene and residence, and a complete change in the mode of living. Phosphorus is the only drug which produces a lasting mental stimulation without a depressing reaction. The best form of exercise is walking up a moderate incline with frequent rests.

Plain Thief Becoming Rare.
A Philadelphia woman stole to keep her daughter from working and a New York woman to keep her son in school. The plain, old-fashioned person who is impelled to steal by reason of being a thief, would be deemed vulgar by the modern larcenist.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

"AND my soul has sought and drawn you Out of the mists of dreams," So ended the poem. "And I believe with all my heart," said the one who read the poem to me, as he closed the book, "that that is possible—not only of love, but also of all things that you want, if you want them enough—you can seek and draw them out of the mists of dreams." I also believe that is possible. Beautifully possible.

But more than that—TERRIBLY possible. Emerson in one of his books tells of meeting an old Methodist farmer in Concord, who said: "Be careful what you pray for. For all sincere prayers are granted." He careful what you pray for. Not only to your God, but to yourself. He careful what you pray for by the force of your ambitions. He careful what you pray for by the force of your ideals. He careful what you pray for by your admirations. He careful what you pray for by the trend of your daily thought. Try to be sure that it is something that will satisfy you when you have attained it. Try to be sure that it is something that, when you are drawing near to the Valley of the Shadow, and looking back across your life, you shall be glad that you prayed and dreamed and thought into realization.

I know a woman whom the world thought was on the highway of success and then lost the road. And the reason was that one day when she suddenly realized that her life was becoming a feverish prayer for financial success, when she found herself perpetually thinking, "I shall soon be able to have this or that," "I am earning more than $8000-850," "I am getting twice as much money than I was at such a time," she stopped and did some thinking.

"The force of my desire is bringing what I want to me," she said, "but is it what I want?"

And she decided it wasn't.

"What a man wants in his youth, if he desires it enough that shall he have in his old age, and plenty of it," says Goethe.

That is not only a promise, but also a threat.

For one's choices are also one's refusals.

"You shall this," means also, "You shall lack that."

I believe the gods give us all a choice of gifts, but when they say, "Which hand will you have?" they don't often allow mortals to say, "Both."

Be careful what you pray for. Stop right now and think.

Is this thing, that by the force of my thoughts and prayers and ambitions and admirations, I am drawing toward me, out of the mist of dreams the best life has to offer?

STYLISH CALLING COSTUME.

This design suggests a gown appropriate for early spring wear without coat. Watteau crepon, with silk to match, makes beautifully on these lines. As a finishing touch there is a stunning hat of Tegal straw in same shade as crepon, faced with silk a shade darker, and trimmed with shaded plumes in same color.

WRONG.

Warned.

The mother was busy in the house and did not notice that a thunderstorm was coming up. Presently Willie came in from play and she said: "Why, Willie, what are you in for? I thought you were to be out all afternoon." Willie replied: "I was, mamma, but God knocked on the sky to let me know it was going to rain so I could come in and keep dry."

Prevent a Cold.

If members of the family come home with wet feet, have them remove their shoes and stockings, spreading a turkish bath towel on the floor, and quickly rub the feet on it until they tingle and burn. A cold will be averted.

Cause of His Good Health.

Mrs. Wilcox says a wife should put love into every kiss she gives her husband. Quite so, quite so. And also into the bread, the soups, and the apple sauce.—The Commissioner.

And stuffed him when he died!"

THE LESSON OF DEPENDENCE.

By MARY RUSSELL.

Can you depend on yourself? If you say "tomorrow I will do this and so," do you do it? Do you keep your word with yourself?

The corner of the pit which is paved with good intentions is probably better paved than most city streets. Most of us are encumbered upon our own good intentions, and are looking for another place to lay the bit we have immediately in hand.

If the contractor who takes charge of the great street improvements could take a few lessons in this art, which we must of us could teach, there would be little of the re-paying which goes on all the time.

Most of us do our jobs pretty effectively and thoroughly.

The worst feature of this unreliability is that it makes us unreliable in our relations with others.

The man who wants a bit of printing on the word of the printer, after he has had one trial. He will provide a contract with a forfeiture clause. It is wonderful what a forfeiture clause will do for an unreliable man!

If a man wants a house or store finished by a certain date, does he talk it over with the architect and state his desires and receive the assurance of the man of plans that it shall be as he wishes. Not much!

Once more the contract with the forfeiture clause secures him from the unreliability of the contractor.

Sometimes we hear of a man whose "word is as good as his bond."

He stands high in the community and is the example set before the younger men. If you examine into his reputation you will find it means that he is scrupulous to keep his word in small things, as well as larger ones.

The money part of a bargain in which his word is involved counts not at all. It is his word—great or small!

Such men are the backbone of the nation. Women who have this great sense of responsibility are rare. They are still in the kindergarten of a life that assumes responsibility and cannot be expected to take such things with the seriousness that they should.

It is common, however, and men will profit by the change as much as the women themselves.

The children who grow to manhood and womanhood in charge of a mother who never breaks her word from sheer wantonness, are going to have a standard of value that will be worth while.

These standards are being established for girls as well as boys. We are already a remarkable nation. When our women develop the manly virtue of reliability, and men the womanly virtue of faithfulness, we will reach a point of development that was undreamed of a decade ago.

WASHING WOOLENS.

How It Can Be Done by Simple Methods and Successfully.

A good soap or washing powder, two or three tubs, one or better still, two family sized wringers, plenty of water, a good drying yard, a boiler, a glass washboard, a really good washing machine and a sunny day are the essentials if one would wash woollens successfully. The quickest, thorough washing is the best method in washing woollens. Except for extremely soiled things, soaking hinders cleanliness rather than helps it.

For the want of a little knowledge in handling natural undyed wools are easily spoiled, though they are just as easily kept in perfect condition if one goes about it in the right way.

In washing all undyed woolen articles a little ammonia can be used to advantage, rendering them soft and deliciously comfortable. Prepare a lather, always using a soap jelly for the purpose. The alkali in the soap jelly is much mollified and less likely to harm the wool.

Soap jelly is made thus: Shred the soap finely, using ends and bits for the purpose. Just cover with water and put in a pan or jar and place on the back of the stove until the soap is all dissolved. It should be freshly made, as it loses its strength if kept long. Use in the proportion of a quarter of a pound of soap to one quart of water. It should be prepared just before washing day to be ready for use.

See that the water is only a little more than tepid heat, work up the lather with the hand, add a little ammonia—a tablespoonful to a gallon of water is the allowance—and plunge in the garment. Never rub on soap or rub between the hands. Rather shake about in the water, using a squeezing sort of motion. Squeeze out this first water, turn and, if dirty, put into a second water with rather less soap jelly and no ammonia. Pass through this water in the same way, then into clean warm water for rinsing. A tablespoonful of ammonia may be added to the rinsing water. Pass through the wringer and then shake well. The importance of this process must be emphasized.

To prevent shrinkage woolen goods must be dried quickly, and much of the moisture can be shaken out, and the shaking also makes the pile of the wool and makes it soft and cozy. Indeed, light knitted goods can be shaken nearly dry. See that such things are pulled into their natural shape before they dry, and hang in the air, but not in the sun. If drying indoors must be resorted to, do not hang too near the fire or in too great a heat. If the slightest steam arises from the woollens when they are drying they are "walking in" as hard as they can.

In regard to the steeping of flannel.

this is unnecessary unless for new flannel or body woollens that are greasy with perspiration. Make a lather with soap jelly, add ammonia, put in the article and steep for half an hour with the cover on. Use the water for the first washing. This process gets all the sulphur dressing out of the flannel.

One or two precautions: Never use ammonia for colored material. The water must not be either too hot or too cold—just tepid—washing and rinsing and all at the same temperature. Too much soap hardens and discolors. If possible, wash only one garment at a time, as if woollen things lie about wet they shrink.

A HOME GOWN.

Fascinating black blouse for evening home wear. It is black upon do sole over white satin, with leaf-shaped motif at waist of black jet embroidery. The bands of insertion at throat and shoulder pieces are also of jet embroidery, and the undersleeves are jet embroidered net.

The skirt is perfectly plain.

Gout the Foe of Consumption.

Sir Dyer Buckworth in his address to the British Faculty of Medicine said that many persons were constitutionally predisposed to rheumatism and gout, but an important characteristic in such cases was the antagonism of the tissues to the bacilli of tuberculosis. The more rheumatic or gouty a person was the less pronounced was his tendency to consumption.

Save the Meat Skewers.

A meat skewer of hard wood is a most useful tool, especially for cleaning a window sash. It goes into corners after oil that no finger is tapering enough to reach.

SOMETHING FOR THE

Every mother at some time has purchased lime water. Very few know anything about the quality. Lime water is one of the cheapest things sold in a drug store. Generally little care is taken to prepare or take care of it.

The ordinary way of making it is to obtain a chunk of lime, throw it into a large jar filled with water, shake occasionaly, and sell the clear liquid.

The little babies are entitled to better thought. Lime water is a valuable infants' remedy for indigestion, sour stomach and use food with milk and milk sugar. Mr. Pfeiffer, our Graduate Pharmacist and Chemist, prepares lime water by adding chemically pure calcium oxide in the exact proportion to sterilized water. It is then stored in clean glass bottles.

You will always find it full strength, not contaminated by dust and dirt as lime in a lumber yard is bound to be.

It is these things that make the difference in quality and the best quality. Chemically pure lime water,

150 pint. Highest purity sugar milk 150 a pound. Each condensed milk 3 cans 50c. Your baby should have the advantage of our good lime water and other drugs. Badger Drug having been raised to assure a celebration. The Monroe firemen will have the affair in charge and in con-game will be arranged to take place in the forenoon and the afternoon will be devoted to various sports on the public square. Fireworks will not be Street Improvement.

The initial step toward making permanent improvements on North

Jefferson street has been made, the

the benefit of his assistance in making the improvement.

Garden Party.

The pupils of the fifth and sixth grades at the East school building held a garden party on the school grounds, a fine report from the garden, figuring in the spread to which Miss Gutting has charge of these grades and has been in charge of the scholarship along line of gardening.

Miss Ada H. Williams is expected home this evening from Chicago

THE TRUNK LINES TO CUT EXPENSES

WESTERN RAILROADS INAU-RATE POLICY TO MEET
LOSS OF REVENUE.

RETRENCHMENT IS IN ORDER

Carriers Will Hold Up All Improvements and Reduce Force of Employes Wherever Possible—Orders for Equipment Cancelled.

Chicago, June 3.—As a result of the court action Wednesday by Judge Dyer, preventing the western trunk line roads from increasing their freight rates, Chicago carriers announce that a period of retrenchment, curtailment of equipment, laying off of men and shortening of hours and work days for those retained, has been begun and will be continued in order to offset the reduced net income and increased operating expenses.

More Advance Schedules Filed.
At the same time eastern roads filed new schedules of advanced freight rates with the interstate commerce commission at Washington to go into effect, unless enjoined, next month.

Notwithstanding the fact that Judge Dyer's injunction failed to include many tariffs, it was admitted in Washington that nothing could be done to enlarge its scope.

Campaign of Retrenchment.

E. J. Ripley, president of the Atchafalaya, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad, admitted that his road had already begun a campaign of retrenchment, which will affect every department of the road, and result in the holding up of several millions of dollars worth of orders for equipment, double tracking and general improvements, as well as the throwing out of employment of thousands of men and cutting down the hours of those retained.

Mr. Ripley scored the government officials for attacking their motives in combining to put the proposed increase into effect at the same time. He declared that in every line of business various interests engaged in the same trade had a general understanding about rates and regulations, and yet it was not called conspiracy.

The action of the Atchafalaya in voluntarily granting an increase Tuesday of ten per cent. in wages to all employees not members of a union, and not drawing more than $80 a month, in the face of repeated statements by Mr. Ripley that the road expenses were already too high to permit of a satisfactory net income, was explained by him as merely giving the clerks a "square deal."

That the Rock Island had begun a system of retrenchment before the injunction of Judge Dyer was admitted by President Henry U. Mudge of that road.

COAL BATTLE IS ON; INDUSTRY IS IN PERIL

Strike Leaders Order Engineers and Pumpmen Out of All Illinois Mines.

Chicago, June 3.—The coal industry of Illinois is in peril and its life is threatened by war declared between operators and miners. The first gun in the battle was fired when strike leaders, refusing to accept the terms prevailing in other states, called out all engineers and pumpmen who have been guarding the miners against destruction, when the strike was called.

Refusing the terms accepted by the miners in other states, leaders of the Illinois strike ordered out engineers and pumpmen who had been left at work to guard against destruction of property during the suspension.

Millions of dollars are involved in the latest strike order, as many of the properties are known as "wet" mines, and they will be irretrievably damaged unless the pumps are kept running. The "dry" mines also will be greatly damaged when the supply of fresh air is shut off by closing down the fans.

In fact of the warlike move of the miners the operators decided to stand firm, and their position was indorsed at a special meeting of the Illinois Manufacturers' association held at the Hotel LaSalle. Though the suspension is costing the manufacturers in Illinois at the rate of $20,000,000 a year extra for fuel, they decided unanimously to stand by the operators to the last ditch in the struggle.

Federal intervention may be asked by the manufacturers; and it was intimated that President Taft may be urged to do as President Roosevelt did in the anthracite coal strike in 1902, when he forced the operators and miners to submit to arbitration.

The Capacity of the Earth.

The port of London's proposed duty on fish and fruit reminds us that fish at least has always been an important constituent of the food supply of the metropolis, and in early times the Thames itself yielded an enormous supply. Westminster abbey formerly claimed a title of the Thames fisheries from Gravesend to Staines, and a lawsuit was successfully maintained against the rector of Rotherhithe in 1282 on the ground that St. Peter had in a vision granted the first haul of salmon in the Thames to Edric the Saxon on condition that a tithe of fish was annually paid to the abbey. And once a year for centuries one of the fishermen as representative of Edric took his place beside the prior, and brought in a salmon for St. Peter, which was carried in state through the refectory.

Haas and his two accomplices were pardoned after they had served two years.

The Ticklemouse

—and his Sleepyland Adventures with Davy and Dorfy

By Roy Rutherford Bailey

A Frolic with Peter Pan

The Ticklemouse crept toward Davy's bed to waken him last night, but stopped at the sight of a book on the chair. "The Story of Peter Pan"—the title looked interesting. He drew a little rocking chair up before the grate fire and began reading Peter Pan's story by the light of the flames.

"Oh, I say, Uncle Ticks," Willy Wish-mouse whispered at last. "Can't I waken the twins? The night will be gone, first thing we know."

"Sure, if you wish away. And I know where we'll go tonight," he added a moment later to the twins. "No Captain Kidd's buried treasure for us this trip. We'll visit Peter Pan in his house among the treetops!"

And to the treetops they went—but the trees were away on the other side of the world, where it was bright daylight and the birds were singing their sweet, fresh, sunrise songs.

"Why, hello!" cried merry Peter Pan, coming to the door of his treetop house at their knock. "It's the Sleepyland twins, isn't it? Let's see—this must be Willy Wishmouse, I suppose," and he looked at the Ticklemouse, with a bright smile.

"That's Willy," squeaked Mr. Tickle-mouse. "The one and only Willy Wish-mouse. Is this the house you built for Wendy, Peter?"

"Just farther away about," laughed Peter Pan. "It's the house they built for me! Did you ever see a jollier little castle in the air, Mr. Mouse?"

"Finest ever!" agreed the Mouse. Davy and Dorfy walked about the little house in the tree, wondering how Peter ever found such cunning little chairs and tables and toy stoves. "What are these little harnesses, Peter?" asked Willy, poking some dainty straps with his foot.

"Flying tackle," answered Peter. "Like to see them work?" He glanced at his tiny hall clock. "Just time for the flying lesson. Come along, if you like," and he went skipping across the leafy treetops like a bird himself.

The four followed him in their airship and watched him knock on the edge of an oriole's nest. The mother oriole popped her head out. "Ready so soon, Peter?"

Peter held one of the little harnesses while the mother bird buckled one of her babies into it. "Ready—let 'er go!" and the baby bird went swinging through the air, fluttering its stubby wings and trying hard to use them right.

Dorfy's eyes grew big as she watched him give each baby bird its flying lesson. As that the way all birds learn to fly," she whispered to Willy Wish-mouse.

"Yes, Peter teaches them all. He—Oh, look out, Peter!" screamed Willy. For the harness had slipped and the last little bird was tumbling, helpless, through the air.

The mother bird screamed, too. But quick as a flash, Willy stood on one leg and shut one eye. "I wish—" he cried, and at the word the falling bird hung in midair, as if caught by an invisible hand. Willy's wish had saved him!

"A cheese for your thoughts, Dorfy," said the Ticklemouse, when Peter had lifted the birdling back to its mother's side and the four were flying for home.

"I was thinking," smiled the little girl, "what fun it must be to give the little birds their lessons, like Peter Pan—and how much more fun it would be to a Wishmouse. Why, from the way that mother bird looked at Willy, I believe she will sing Wishmouse songs all the rest of her life!"

WAS HE A SPOOK?

By EDWIN T. GARRISON

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Some students were disputing. One of the party declared that the psychical research societies would one day prove that spiritual bodies revisited their former haunts. In support of his belief he told the following story:

Elbert Ellison was a prodigy at school, carried off all the prizes in college, could declaim in almost any language, was the best shot, swordsman, whist and chess player, artist, musician, that the sun ever shone upon. As for love-making, no woman could resist him.

I was a member of a small social circle in a place where Ellison spent some time. He appeared like a rising sun. In a very brief period he had captured every one of us, young men and young women alike. He came on the 1st of June, and on the 2d, by his expertness in the water, saved two girls and a man from drowning. On the 3d he won the championship at tennis; on the 4th he beat a professional billiard player. Then followed a series of feats calculated to put to the blush the athletic youths of ancient Athens.

By this time every girl in the place was in love with him. He was a handsome chap, with a Byron head and neck, and could write verses that judges of such matters pronounced remarkable. One Sunday when a parson was ill Ellison supplied his pulpit and preached the most remarkable sermon that was ever heard in that church.

One girl among those who fell in love with Ellison seemed to find favor in his sight. She was Lois Haverly, a quiet, demure creature with large, dreamy eyes. She was not prominent in any of the affairs going on in the place, but was held in a sort of reverence by the others. Had it not been for her retiring disposition she would have been a belle, for she possessed a beauty in repose that was very effective. Many a young fellow on first seeing her thought he would fall in love with her, but when he came to talk with her was chilled. Was it her want of interest in him or that she occupied a plane too far above him? It was certainly not her stupidity.

When Ellison appeared she became another person. She was often seen chatting with him with great animation, to say nothing of flashes of wit. Before long we were all watching this couple, who seemed to be the complement of each other. We agreed that it required a universal genius to awaken her dormant faculties. Every one was saying, "What a pair those two will make!"

The only difference between Ellison's bearing toward Lois Haverly and other girls was that he seemed to be intent upon fascinating her. He would when chatting with her keep his eyes fixed on hers as though pouring his soul through her orbs to mingle with her own soul behind them. At such times there was an absence of his own brilliancy. He seemed rather to be exciting hers. There was a suggestion of something plaintive both in him and in her. Many a time I have watched them when they were together, too far to hear what they were saying, and it came to me that he was playing upon her as he would upon a zither.

Then one day everybody was asking, "What has become of Ellison?" No body knew. He certainly wasn't with us any more. Of course we all turned to Lois. All she would say was that she didn't know any more of Mr. Ellison's whereabouts than the rest of us.

He didn't reappear, and Lois sank back into her former condition. The only change was a profound sadness that had settled upon her, and the dream in her eyes was intensified.

Ellison never returned. Some time after his disappearance the woman who owned the house where he lived told me that at the time he left her she had found a drop of blood on the hearthstone in his room. I asked her if any one was with him at that time, and she said there was no one. He had gone up to bed at 10 o'clock, the house had been carefully locked—she was fearful of burglars—and no one had been in during the night. In the morning when her lodger didn't come down she went to his room. It was empty, the bed had not been slept in, and a drop of blood was on the hearth. Lois wept and grew frail and lived only about six months after Ellison's going.

I got it into my head that the fellow was some sort of spook. At any rate, I could never trace his antecedents or his identity after he left us. One day, having nothing better to do, I wrote out an account of the case and sent it to a society for psychical research.

After some weeks I received a reply from the secretary. It stated that the society had discussed the matter of Elbert Ellison, but that there was nothing in it that any one could grasp. One of the members had made a suggestion to which I was welcome. It was this: In the sixteenth century lived a Scotchman named Crichton, who was a universal genius. He spoke a dozen languages and could dispute on any subject in Latin. He excelled in all exercises and sports. While in the service of the Duke of Mantua and tutor to the duke's son he was assassinated. Ellison's accomplishments, his vanishing and the drop of blood on his hearth would seem to indicate that this man Crichton had paid the earth a visit.

Mr. Lear's Memory System.
In 1871 Edward Lear was staying with the governor of Bombay at Mahabaleshwar, the hill station of the Bombay presidency. I was there and took a walk with him one day. I told him they were called "Jambul" trees in India. He immediately produced his sketch book and in his familiar style drew a bull looking into a jam pot. He said it would help him to remember the name.—Spectator.

No Substitute For Newspaper Advertising.

Advertising pays, if the man that has something to sell so regulates his advertisement as to convince the people that his store is the place to buy. All the substitutes for newspaper advertising are less effective. People do not stand looking at bill boards, and they do not bother with circulars in the mail on the doorstep because there are too many, but their old friend, the newspaper, is taken into the inmost privacy of the family circle, it is discussed at the supper table and again the next morning. It is read at leisure in the evening, and its pages are scrutinized with the interest born of long habit and discriminating taste. An advertisement in the newspaper goes into the family circle and cannot be excluded. It is welcome because it is a part of something else that is welcome, and it goes there at the very time when the occasional domestic economical council takes place. There is no substitute for newspaper advertising.

There is no newspaper in Janesville with a circulation ONE-FIFTH as large as that of the GAZETTE.

GRANDPA SCATTERGOOD.

AD WOLGAST IN THE ROLE OF FARMER.

Ad Wolgast, lightweight champion, has views of his own on training. The fighter would much rather work around on his farm near Cadillac, Michigan, than do anything else. When he was a boy Adolph was in on the plowing stunt more than once, but then he tried his best to duck the job. "Now he goes out hunting it. And because he realizes that plenty of fresh air is what he needs to help him to get in shape for a ring battle. Bright and early each morning that he is home Wolgast gets up and chases around the farm, doing anything that shows. He thinks it's fun. The present stunt is in preparation for the boxing bout with Jack Redmond at Milwaukee June 10, and for any others that may follow along.

Prized Japanese Swords.

Though sword manufacture has ceased to be in Japan today outside of the government arsenals which turn out only the accepted military blade of the modern army, the country is filled with prized relics of the past art; and these are relics which the Japanese will not sell. A possession of one of the old swords, keen and blue white in hilt as the day it was forged, would sell his house, even himself, maybe, before he would part with his iron Bible of Bushido for money.

Like eating, advertising should be continuous. When today's breakfast will answer for tomorrow's you can advertise on the same principle.
